There, at the beginning of the second century AD, the Emperor Nero once had a small palace built. The central part of this palace was the theater, as is indicated by the excavations. In the second century, or soon after, he made it into a mausoleum. After the fall of the Roman Empire, the town declined to a small community, but the ruins of the palace were preserved. The population did not grow until the 19th century and today Hallstatt has 25,000 inhabitants.

Howto Clean Toolbar Google Talk Messages How to Clean Toolbar MessagesHow to Clean Toolbar Messages The toolbar messages are the ones you can see in between the address and the people list, they are also referred to as contacts or google talk messages. The messages that show up in these spaces are messages the accounts have shared with you. If your main focus is your contacts then this could be a bothersome and annoying distraction. You might think to yourself, how do I get rid of those contacts in the toolbar. Here are a few tips how to clean up those toolbar messages and you are less likely to come across them. How to Clean Toolbar Messages 1 Disable the toolbar messages. Step 1 Open the toolbar and find the entry "Toolbar Messages". Step 2 Open "Toolbar Messages" and you will see two options that will disable and enable the toolbar messages. You can either toggle them on and off or you can turn them off. Disabling the toolbar messages will allow you to stop new messages that you did not initiate appearing in your toolbar messages. Because of the fact that the messages in the toolbar do not show up in the address bar, you won't know they are there, so there is no way to tell them to go away if you disable them. This works best with the new Google Talk window. If you have multiple browsers open, you can not only block messages for Google Talk but you can block all messages that have been sent to you. Step 3 2 Disable hidden messages. Step 1 Open the toolbar and find the entry "Toolbar Messages". Step 2 Open "Toolbar Messages" and you will see two options that will disable and enable the toolbar messages. You can either toggle them on and off or you can turn them off.
