writing short stories, I was actually working at a well known broadcasting company at the time. I had had an idea about an email spoofing software which would allow you to spoof emails to someone else (or make your own email look like someone else's) so that if you were in a busy place with lots of people, you could send them messages to their inbox (without you even knowing about it) and get laid. It was what I do with the things I like that I found very important when I started writing a short story. I know that I was more than likely not the first person to make up a story about that but it still got me off and is my only original idea that I remember at the moment. Let's see how we make it happen. Before the scene starts... I had finished work at the show, the volume of the talking was so high that I could barely hear my own thoughts let alone the guy I was on the phone with. "Yes, ok. Ok, now this is one for sure. Ok, bye, I love you, I love you." I looked around. It was a well known parking lot. It was crowded, but there were at least 50 cars and it was not yet 6pm so it must be rush hour. I got out of the car and started walking towards the building in the distance. I was only a few blocks away. My boss had left me a note to be home by 6pm to finish off the last part of the project and it was important. I never knew it was a six pm rush. I was almost there and to my surprise, I was not alone. I looked around and saw a couple in a similar situation to mine. The guy was shorter and a little bit younger than me. He wrote: Don't worry, 8th gen is only for a few years. Intel is no doubt going to make a 4+ year high performance CPU with 12 or more cores. We'll probably also see the release of 8th gen/4K HDR displays soon. The PS4 Pro is specifically designed with 8th gen in mind, so it's easier to imagine 8th gen replacing the current generation, and 8th gen integrating the current generation. It is interesting to note that the Xbox One S only has 4K 1080p output, and the PS4 Pro has 4K UHD (2160p), yet the two consoles are basically identical except for the HDD size. Possibly there's some 8th gen level hardware that's being kept hidden. It's also interesting that there's going to be a large jump (10X?) in RAM capacity with 4K HDR, and that PS4 Pro specs are approximately two times what PS4 has now. Maybe the PS4 Pro is two generations ahead, releasing in 1H2018. With only a few years left to go, maybe Sony gives us a glimpse of their 8th gen hardware, so we can all know our limitations. @ZioZaZo. Given that Sony is working on a motion controller, we would assume that 8th gen hardware would be far better suited for motion gaming than the current 7th generation of hardware. @buchzdew. The rumored higher resolution PS4 Pro contains 4K UHD (2160p), not 4K. With 6 terabytes of storage, the PS4 Pro may be able to upgrade to 8 terabytes of storage so user purchases can be saved to the cloud. Instead of rear camera being 1080P and front camera being 720P, the rumored 8th gen PS4 Pro will have two 1080P cameras, so it would be even better when it comes to the image quality. Mumico wrote: Given the mockups, the 8th Gen looks to be absolutely gigantic, with an ass ton of improvement over the 7th Generation. I expected something "modern" in design, much like the XONAR H3/7/8, which have a modern but sophisticated look-and-feel and low noise. Now, the "older" design and specifications of the hardware are more like the original PS3, but that could have been the reason why the PS4 S has been delayed for so
