Produced and directed by Harold Goodwin, the series ran from February 22, 1942 to April 16, 1945.

These films were based on the character Anne Shirley from L. Frank Baum's popular 1900 children's book The Wonderful Wizard of Oz. Premise Based on characters from a popular children's story, the films are about a young girl who is lost on an island, and joins forces with the Tin Man, Cowardly Lion, and Scarecrow to help her find her way home.

Overview Anne Shirley and her friends became regulars of a number of the Warner Bros. series of musical short subjects. After the first four films, films about the characters were generally not made. The heroines in the films were modeled on established child stars of the time, such as Shirley Temple and Margaret O'Brien, while the villain was modeled on the character Dorothy from The Wizard of Oz, as director Harold Goodwin stated in his autobiography.
