What's new in Dimension Drifter:

Review It's no secret that many MMOs have tried to incorporate the Vegas-style gambling aspect into their games. Times a-changin', folks! Gambling has a new home with the upcoming Silvermoon Isle and Reckoning. I have just completed a short review and want to get to the full review in the next day or so. First off, Silvermoon Isle is in beta. Basically, whenever you log into a character that is assigned to a dungeon for the first time, you will be asked if you want to join a dungeon where you will end up gambling, fail, and lose your character. If you join a dungeon where you will fail and end up losing a character, you end up being given a lucky item. If you get lucky, you'll be able to join the same dungeon again without losing your character. The chances of winning are fairly low unless you join a very lucky dungeon, so you should try to join a lucky dungeon as often as you can. When you die, you have the choice to accept the invitation to reroll and a chance to get lucky. Accepting this is equivalent to accepting up to 3 chances to win every time, because the likelihood of winning will increase until you lose. While you play, you will be prompted about events that occur in the world and events that occur within the dungeon. Events in the world occur fairly frequently for the most part. These will fall into categories such as: 1. Fallen Dungeon 1. Fallen Dungeon 2. Fallen Dungeon 3. Fallen Dungeon 4. Fallen Dungeon 5. Fallen Dungeon 6. Blizzard 1. Blizzard 2. Blizzard 3. Blizzard 4. Blizzard 5. Blizzard 6. Blizzard 7. Blizzard 8. Blizzard The majority of these events involve having random players fall through the center of the dungeon in one of three ways. Once there, they are trapped inside of the walls of the dungeon (and there are 3 of them per dungeon). Once they are trapped, they are put into a waiting room until a player picks them out. They can be rescued by other players using Phoenix Down, Gurubashi Axe, Iron Hammer, Sleeping Giant, or Black Lion Roar. While you're trapped in one of the rooms in the dungeon, you'll be in the lobby trying to reach the boss. When it's time to fight the boss, a random encounter will occur in the room. Each boss is different from one another with unique abilities and attacks. The boss fights are fairly easy. There are,
