Q: Why are my GameObject's rotation/scale values being set to (0, 0, 0) by AutoMapping? I have a Unity3D GameObject. The Unity's scale is (1, 1, 1). When the object is added to the scene, its transform values are (1, 1, 1). But when the values are sent to a server, the values are (0, 0, 0) which makes the object unplayable. What should I do to make the Unity's values(scale and rotation) equal to my values(not auto-generated ones)?

UPDATE 1: I've already tried to set the values as constants in my scripts. Here is the code for it: public const float ScaleM = 1f; public const float RotationM = 1f; I've also set these variables in the Start() method. The values are still not the same. What should I do? A: Its just the default settings from the unity autogenerated values not your values in scripts. You need to change them manually if you want something else. You can change them manually by following this answer. [The treatment of leg ulcers]. Polygraphic lesions, which impair the patient's physical condition and the treatment of which is often troublesome, may be associated with leg ulcers. These ulcers are generally caused by venous insufficiency, but skin and muscle disturbances are possible. The aetiology determines the therapy. Venous ulcers should be treated with gentle non-constrictive methods or ulcers resistant to compression therapy. For ankylosing spondylitis and for pyoderma gangrenosum the etiological therapy in accordance with the clinical assessment must be selected. It is stated that the type of therapy depends on the underlying disease. Venous ulcers should be treated in accordance with the current guidelines for venous disease. The best results are achieved when the patient is treated by a specialist and when the maximum conservative treatment is used.

FX brokers provide you access to the foreign exchange market, and an opportunity to trade the foreign exchange market. A number of factors will determine which broker you choose. and fees charged. The most important question to ask yourself is whether to choose a Forex broker with many years of experience, or a less established broker. . Forex brokers are classified as Authorized Dealer, Licensed Dealer or Non- Dealer.

The Authorized Dealer is the most professional and reputable broker.

Brokers usually only offer the product/services they are authorised to offer. Licensed Dealers are brokers that make money by offering you a low spread (a percentage of the rate fluctuation).

They are an attractive option for new traders because the customer protection provided by the FCA means that if you have a loss, the broker is required to make good and cover the loss. The Non-Dealer Forex broker is the least regulated or insured broker. The Forex broker who does not deal in currencies is not responsible for your losses. . Forex Broker requirements for Authorised Dealers . The FCA introduced brand new laws in September 2007 regarding the regulation of Forex brokers. The majority of Forex brokers offering forex products and services on the High street are Authorized Dealers. The UK and some other countries, including EU countries, have authority to supervise market participants and set the rules that govern the market. Authorized Dealers are covered by these laws and have to apply for authorisation and adhere to the Authorized Activities Rules. . The biggest difference between
