this glitch occurs if the player closes the trailer of the rtv that you chose and creates a build. though it doesn't affect the gameplay, it is still a glitch. if you ever have the build ready, it can be displayed in the collection menu. though this glitch hasn't happened to anyone yet, if the player will play, you have a chance to see the glitch. and it's really a shame if you're planning on completing the mode, as the game glitched out a big part of the map in the last level, which will not let the player play the game normally. in addition, the map glitched out more than one mission in the mission mode. this glitch was intentional, and may also be found in some old versions of the game. another glitch if the player watches the rtv trailer more than once. when the build finishes, the game would crash immediately, forcing the player to restart the build, but after the crash, if the player watches the trailer again, the video will lose the ability to be paused, thus the build can't be saved. this may also happen for other videos besides rtvs, but rtvs have the highest chance to trigger this glitch due to their popularity. it's recommended that the player stops watching the video once it's done, as it's the one that triggers this glitch. if the player leaves the mission area and cannot be found or they're permanently stuck, they can reset to any mission by entering the mission again. if they start the mission again at a later point, it will take longer for cj to arrive at the mission. if the player turns on weapon forensics, the player's camcorder will start to run out of battery (even though it's set to always on). if the player leaves the mission area, the battery will eventually completely run out. if the player kills the camera, it will keep running indefinitely (even if the player presses button to turn the camcorder off). if the player turns the camcorder off, the player will be forced to restart the mission, as the camcorder will not be able to restart.

a glitch can happen when the player is in a car that is on high terrain and the player attempts to jump on the highest terrain. if the player jumps from the car to high terrain and auto-jumps while on high terrain, it may be possible to fall over the edge of the actual terrain. this glitch can be fixed by saving the game while the player is on high terrain, by refreshing the game from the top menu or as a last resort, by resetting the game. note: this glitch cannot be fixed by loading a previous save. this glitch sometimes causes vehicles with the 'new york' or 'los angeles' license plates to drive over pedestrians and other vehicles on the edge of the sidewalk, causing the vehicle to break apart. the vehicle does not always go this far, as it may not reach the maximum height or the vehicle may reach the maximum height and then autorun off. a video explanation can be found here. if the player starts the mission tagging up turf with cj car 33, the player will get a crash while driving on highway 74, which is a patch of solid dirt after the player enters the mission, but the crash will not happen if the player enters the mission with car 33. the windows version of the game had a bug in the level select menu, where the user was able to make the game crash by selecting an entry in the level select menu. this can be solved by entering the game with a user profile that has version 1.9.3 or later installed. the game will keep the player's saved progress and try to load every kind of saved format (including the mission.bin files in the mission folder).

to avoid this, the steam/steamapps/common/team fortress 2/data/install/x64/data/saved_progress folder must be empty when installing the game for linux. 5ec8ef588b
