We treated a 71-year-old man with a popliteal aneurysm and a popliteal arterial embolism by emergency operation. A new stent graft system (Elephant stent graft) was inserted for the aneurysm and an end-to-side anastomosis was performed for the embolism. The distal anastomosis of the stent graft was performed to the left common femoral artery and the proximal anastomosis was performed to the dorsal pedal artery. We obtained good results without any thrombotic complication, and the patient can walk with a cane. This type of graft is useful for treating both a popliteal aneurysm and a popliteal arterial
